MAKE COUNTY ROADS BEST IN THE STATE

Everybody Should Get Out and Hustle With Pick And Shovel

MANY AUTOS WILL CONVEY MEN TO WORK

Let Clearfield County Citizens Make Record of Which They and Their Children May be Proud

With the appearance of the sun today the hope of those who feared that the wet weather would interfere with the program of Good Roads Day tomorrow revived. The rains of the past three days soaked the ground completely, but except in certain localities it is believed that the highways will be in condition to permit work to be done on them tomorrow. Where there is still dampness the road drag will be found very useful.

Many Automobiles Ready

All preparations for the great day have been completed, and indications point to a big outpouring of hard-handed sons of toil in every section of the county. Arrangements have been made with owners of automobiles and thirty-six of these cars will be at the service of the workers tomorrow, while wagons will convey others to the places in which they choose to work.

Get Out and Hustle Tomorrow

Everybody should get out and hustle tomorrow. Clearfield county should have the best township roads in Central Pennsylvania, and this will be the result if the men and boys of the county do their duty tomorrow. One day's work will not hurt anybody, and after it is all over the contemplation of the benefit that has been derived from a task well done and the getting in touch with the residents of the townships will be ample reward for lame backs and blisters. Get out on the roads and make the dirt fly.

Meet at High School Building

All men and boys who intend to work on the Penfield road will meet at the high school building tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock or as soon thereafter as possible. Workers are requested to bring with them their dinners, picks and shovels. Three automobiles will convey lunches to the different sections of the road. The suffragists will have charge of the refreshments.

It is proposed to begin work on the Penfield road at the borough line and work as far as the watering trough at the top of the mountain. The high school building will be headquarters for a number of the squads who will work on the roads. The high school boys will be in charge of Professor Zerfoss.

Some Stores Will Close

Good Roads Day enthusiasm has been so spontaneous that the Chamber of Commerce decided at a meeting of its board of governors yesterday not to ask its members to close their stores Wednesday. Notwithstanding that, there will be a number of local houses closed part of the day, at least, and all employees will be given an opportunity to contribute their services to the general movement.

TWILIGHT BASEBALL LEAGUE PREPARING FOR GOOD GAMES

Baseball! The fans will again have the opportunity of seeing some fast ball playing this evening, if the condition of the grounds will permit. A new team which will be known as the "West Side" has been admitted. Several rules were made last Thursday when a reorganization of the Twilight league was effected. One of these rules requires each manager to file with the secretary an eligible list, on which there are but 15 men. Under the new organization the league will be governed in a more successful manner.

Standing of the teams.

Team	Won	Lost	Per cent.
Reedsville	3	0	1.000
Barbers	3	1	.750
C. R. C.	2	1	.666
H. W. B.	1	1	.500
Third Ward Hose	1	2	.333
Penn Public	0	2	.000
West Side	0	0	.000

This evening's schedule.

Third Ward Hose vs. P. R. S. at park.
Reedsville vs. C. R. C. at East End.
Wednesday—No games scheduled.

Trolley Car Kills Morrisdale Miner

John Bodick, a miner who worked at the Morrisdale shaft at Morrisdale, was struck and killed by a trolley car Saturday in that place. Bodick and two companions were walking along the track when a car approached them. Just as the car was near the men Bodick stepped on the track and was almost instantly killed.

An investigation by Coroner Pollum showed that the motorman had taken every precaution to prevent an accident and that the man had met death by his own act in stepping on the track when he knew a car was approaching him. No inquest was held.

MAKING LITTLE BUSINESS MEN—WILL YOU HELP?

The cheerful young gentleman who delivers your paper this afternoon is one of the young business men of the city, if you please, for he has been taken into partnership with The Progress.

Heretofore the young man has been paid a stipulated sum for delivering papers on a certain route. That arrangement limited his earnings, and he wanted an opportunity to earn more. So we are turning over to him the pleasant responsibility of calling on you every Saturday morning to collect for the paper. Six cents will be the sum, and he will get a share of it which will almost double his present pay.

With your approval of the plan theseyoung men (there are seventeen of them, by the way) will begin their new duties on the first Saturday in June. All monthly accounts will be closed as of May 30, and subscriptions due on that date will be called for by the regular collectors. Paid in advance subscribers will not be called upon under the new system until their subscriptions expire.

Will you help these young men in their first business venture? They are enthusiastic over the plan, and promise you unfailing service.

BAVARIAN TROOPS ARE MASSACRED BY GUNS OF GERMANS

Kaiser's Officers Turn Guns on Own Men Who Wanted to Surrender

Saxon Soldiers Brutally Shot Down by Prussians While They Stood in Front of British Lines With Their Hands Above Their Heads in Token of Surrender.

London, May 25.—The British "eye-witnesses" at the army headquarters in France describes the scene, mentioned in the official report at the time, of German artillery fire being directed on their own men who were offering to surrender near Ferme Cour de Le Boue.

"Desperate fighting," says the narrative, "was going on in front of this farm when the remains of a battalion of Saxons which, it appears, had been hastily brought down from further north, were thrown into the fight. Having decided to surrender en bloc, they advance dtoward our lines. Not knowing what movement this mass of men implied, our infantry poured a hail of bullets into them, whereupon survivors threw down their rifles and held up their hadns. One of their number waved a white rag tied to a stick.

"As soon as the Prussian infantry on the north of this point realized what their Saxon comrades were trying to do, they opened a rapid fire from the flank, enfilading them. It appears also that the news of what was happening must have been telephoned to German artillery further east, which also porbably was Prussian, since its guns suddenly opened on the Saxon infantry, and under this combined fire most of the latter were very soon accounted for."

Inspect State Road at Curwensville

W. D. Myers, state highway engineer, accompanied by the county commissioners, W. C. Longsford, J. S. Richards and H. L. Bowman, left this afternoon for Curwensville, where, together with the borough officials of that town they will inspect the new state road which has just been completed there.

The road is of brick laid on a concrete base and was built by the Curwensville Construction company under the direct supervision of the local office of the state highway department. The road is 6038 feet in length and lies entirely in Curwensville borough.

The construction company and the state highway department are being highly commended on this excellent peice of road. The total cost of the road if $26,789.56, of which sum the county and the borough will each pay a fourth, the state paying the balance.

LACK OF HOUSES GREATLY HAMPERS TEXTILE COMPANY

Homes Needed for a Large Number of Skilled Silk Operatives

Company Desires to Double Its Capacity, But Must Wait Until Housing of New Employes is Assured —Local Capital May be Induced to Erect Buildings on the West Side.

"Just as soon as we can find houses for them to live in comfortably, and permanently, my principals are prepared to double the capacity of the Clearfield Textile company's plant," said E. H. Crozier, American agent for the European interests which own the local silk mill, on a recent visit to the city.

"Our plans are ready to be put into execution," he continued, "but the folly is apparent of bringing a hundred or more skilled workerss to the city when there are no homes available for them."

Would Double Capacity

The company plans to add 75 looms to the 75 now in operation as soon as it is assured that the skilled operators engaged for the additional looms will be properly housed.

"Why doesn't the company itself erect houses for its operators?" Mr. Crozier was asked.

"My people are unwilling to invest any part of their capital in house construction. They are silk producers, and all the money they can find for investment is used in the expansion of the plants they now have in operation in this country and Europe."

Local Capitalists Interested

The Chamber of Commerce is bending its energies toward finding the capital necessary for the construcion of moderate priced homes in the vicinityq of the silk mill, adn a number of local men are interested in this development of the west side. Twenty or more small homes are needed to accommodate the added force the mill people are waiting to bring to Clearfield, and there is every assurance that they will be provided.

NINE MEN KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Johnstown, May 25.—An explosion in mine No. 1 of the Valley Smokeless Coal company, near here, late yesterday, caused nine deaths. Eight miners were killed by the explosion and Homer Phillips, chief of the first aid department of the Cambria Steel company, died in a hospital last night as a result of being overcome by gas while heading a rescue party.

The miners killed, all of whom were Americans were:

Edward Evans and his sons—David and [illegible] Evans, Jacob Wolf, John Hoffman, Charles Stephein, Valentine Chesal and C. F. Hays.

The mine was not in operation yesterday and the victims had received permission to go what work they could to earn extra money. No one was near the mine when the explosion, which was about 2000 feet from the entrance, occurred.

ITALIAN SUCCESSES ON BOTH LAND AND SEA

Italians Capture Goritz and Several Other Austrian Towns Near Border

ITALIAN CRUISER SHELLS PORTZ-BURZO

King Emanuel on Way to The Front and Receives Enthusiastic Ovation From His People

(By United Press)

London, May 25. Italian successes on the sea and land were detailed but to small extent, in reports received here today.

The Italian cavalry crossed the boundary at Isondra and captured several enemy outposts.

An Italian cruiser shelled the city of Portz-Burzo, at the head of the Adriatic. The Austrian gunboat Quay was destroyed and two of the enemy were killed. There were no casualties aboard the destroyer.

King Goes to Front

King Victor Emanuel is on his way to the front, escorted by the cavalry and is being greeted with an enthusiastic ovation.

For publishing details that the British fleet was in the Adriatic, the admiralty issued a reprimand to the Rome newspapers, as it was desired to have these facts as little known as possible.

During the bombardment of Ancona two persons were killed in a train which was struck. Part of the station and five engines were badly damaged.

Austrians Attack Coast

Austria-Hungary opened hostilities against Italy yesterday morning by a combined aerial and naval attack on several ports of the Adriatic coast from Venice as far south as Barletta, north of Bari, a total distance of about 250 miles. The attack failed, according to an official announcement made by the Italian government, the Austrians being forced to withdraw.

Aeroplanes are Active

Austrian aeroplanes, flying from Pola, the naval base, during the night, appeared over Venice shortly after 4 o'clock this morning and attempted to hurl bombs on the arsenal. Anti-air craft guns at the forts guarding Venice blazed away at the invaders, while Italian airmen and a dirigible flying over the Adriatic came to the rescue. The Austrians were driven off.

Austrians Forced to Flee

At about the same time other Austrian air craft attacked the ports of Porto Corsini, 6 miles south of Venice, Ancona, 8 miles further south, and Gesi, 14 miles below Ancona. Austrian torpedo boats and a small scout steamer made an attack on Barletta, about 25 miles north of Bari, and a slight naval engagement followed, the Italian vessels forcing the Austrians to flee to the northward.

ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS EXHIBIT AT ST. FRANCIS SCHOOL

An anti-tuberculosis exhibition similar to that given in the high school was given Monday afternoon in the St. Francis parochial school. A very interesting lecture on subjects of vital importance in this connection was given by Dr. S. J. Waterworth. Those who took part in the previous exhibitions also gave talks.

The Anti-Tuberculosis committee of the Womans club will give an exhibit of charts with short talks by Dr. C. C. Bovard and Mr. Lewis, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at the Third ward school Wednesday, at 11 a. m. and at the Fourth ward school Thursday at 3 p. m., by Dr. J. W. Gordon and Mr. Lewis. All who are interested are invited to come.

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 25, 1915

Good evening! Anybody can be cheerful in nice weather; it is the philosopher who can be cheerful when the clouds are pouring down wetness.

EVERYBODY GETTING READY

With the rural population, at least, the absorbing topic of conversation at present is the forthcoming State-wide Good Roads Day. If the enthusiasm which is apparent in the country districts continues to grow there will be a small army of workmen on the highways tomorrow, May twenty-sixth, and each man and boy will have a pick or shovel in his hands, doing what he can to uphold the reputation of the townships for good work on the roads.

Should the weather be favorable there is not the least doubt that everybody not prevented by sickness or other disability will labor to improve the township highways. From every part of Clearfield county come reports of the desire of the male population to be enrolled in the army of road makers. Even the women have been seized by the spirit of activity that is abroad, and while they cannot wield the road-making implements they can cheer those who work and provide refreshments for the laborers.

There is no disputing the fact that many of the township roads in this county are in need of improvement. Some of these roads are practically impassable at certain times of the year, and if these can be put in fairly good condition on Good Roads Day the effect cannot help being beneficial, not only to the farmers residing in the townships, but to the town resident who uses the roads for pleasure driving in automobile or buggy. Under the direction of the supervisors these roads can be and no doubt will be greatly improved.

Those townspeople who frequently drive into the country are as much interested in the work of improving the highways as are the rural communities. The urbanite is cordially invited to join the crews which will work on the roads leading into Clearfield, and they will be recreant of their duty, both to themselves and the country residents, if they fail to "make the dirt fly" tomorrow. The town resident should not let his mind dwell upon possible blisters, but should feel that it is a great honor to be with and work with those who want to see Pennsylvania have the best rural roads of any state in the union.

PRO-GERMANISM AND COMMON SENSE

Because Dr. Dernburg, Count von Bernstorff and other German citizens who owe this country only the courtesies expected of men who are the nation's guests, and none of the obligations imposed upon others of their birth who are now generally classified as German-Americans, prove offensive in their efforts to justify kultur-murder, there seems little justification for the unpleasant position in which several millions of our citizens have been placed by reason of their now happily curbed activity.

To our intense Americanism it is not inconceivable that in the overseas war an overwhelming proportion of our hyphenated Americans of German origin are strong, even reckless, in defense of their Fatherland or the land of their fathers, and the methods used by Germany in waging war upon enemies who have been considered by two generations of Germans as hereditary foes of the empire.

Could our Americanism, or common sense, depending upon the viewpoint, picture ten millions of American expatriates resident in Great Britain, we might ask what would be the sentiment among them in the event of war between Germany and the United States? And we would answer with perfect assurance. They would be just as intensely pro-American in such a situation as our German-American citizens are pro-German in the present one.

If our heedless critics of pro-Germanism would pause to fit to themselves the case of the German-American, we believe that to some ten millions of our fellow-citizens would quickly be restored all the honors of their adopted citizenship and the full masure of this country's confidence in their loyalty to the flag which to them must represent ideals impossible of attainment in the land of their immediate forefathers.

Clearfield is interested in the news from Trieste, because Fen Chase is American consul at Fiume, not far from that center of disturbance.

It takes as long for an Englishman to see the seriousness of the present war as it does for him to "fall" for a joke.

Boosts and Booms For State Good Roads Day

Harrisburg, May 25.—The road commissioners of Solley township Sullivan county, have issued a statement to the citizens calling on them to observe the State-wide Good Roads Day; "The success of the day depends on you. Its possibilities are great and if each of us does our little share it will designate a great improvement in the conditions of the road." declares the statement. Commenting on this the Republican News Item of Laporte, says: "Wishing for better highways won't bring them, but a determination to get out and hustle will stimulate the movement."

The farm bureau in Lycoming county is exercising every effort to make the State-wide Good Roads Day successful. D. H. Bell, county agriculturist, has issued an appeal to citizens to work on that day. William Decker, of Montgomery, chairman of the school committee, has offered a one-hundred-dollar prize to the township or townships considered the most deserving because of improvements made to their roads during the coming season.

Cooperation of the propper sort is exhibited in Butler county. The Butler chamber of commerce, Butler Businessmens' association and the Butler country farm bureau, together with several other organizations acting with the officers of the township supervisor's association have organized a central committee of forty-five divided into four sub-committees, each to perform special service on that day. Suggestion is made that should May 26 prove stormy, the first good day thereafter be devoted to Good Roads.

An enthusiastic mass meeting was held on Saturday, May 8, in Elmhurst. Support was pledged to the Lackawanna County Good Roads association to aid in making the State-wide Good Roads Day successful.

Roosevelt's Statement Not Libel, Says Jury

A jury in Syracuse decided Saturday that the following statement, made by Theodore Roosevelt, on July 22, 1914, referring to William Barnes, Jr., is no libel:

"In New York state we see at its worst the development of the system of bipartisan boss rule. The outcome of this system is necessarily that invisible government which the Progressive party was in large part founded to oppose. It is impossible to secure the economic, social and industrial reforms to which we are pledged until this invisible government of the party bosses, working through the alliance between crooked business and crooked politics, is rooted out of our government system.

"The state government is rotten throughout in most of its departments.

"The interests of Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy are fundamentally identical, and when the issue between popular rights and corrupt and machine-ruled government is clearly drawn, the two bosses will always be found fighting on the same side, openly or covertly, giving one another such support as can with safety be rendered.

"They really form the allpowerful, invisible government which is responsible for the maladministration and corruption in the public offices of the state."

Only 5% PLUS for the Best "Non-Skid"

PRACTICALLY all Non-Skid Tires that make serious claims to non-skid efficiency cost you 10% to 30% more than Plain Tread Tires of same brand and material.

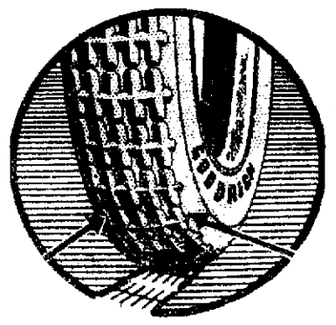
Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our plain tread tires.

Here's how and Why!

FORTY-FIVE years of Rubber learning (in what is now the World's largest Rubber Factory) has taught us a few Tricks and Short-cuts that are not common to the Trade.

One of these now comes to the help of your Pocket-book.

Through the simple process of Thinking Hard (and being Candid with ourselves) we have found a Short-Cut to make the last Safety Tread ever put on a Tire cost us only about 5% more than it costs to make the Plain-Tread of similar quality.



Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our own or any other plain tread tires.

By testing out these Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires on a large number of Taxicabs (where they could be competitively observed and carefully checked up at the end of each day's use) and by comparing their actual performance with that of our own, and other Plain-Treads, of much higher price, we have had this fact forced upon us—

Viz:

—That there is SURPRISINGLY more Mileage, in Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, than in our own, or any other, make of Plain-Tread Tires.

So MUCH more Mileage, for only 5% more Cost, looked so good to us that we decided to give Car Owners the benefit.

Here's what we now offer you!

The best Non-Skid Safety Tread ever put on the market, and it costs you only 5% more than our best plain tread tire.

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice Macdougal, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an anthropoid ape skeleton and a living inhuman creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his rooms have appeared from nowhere black boxes containing sarcastic, threatening notes signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder. The black boxes continue to appear in uncanny fashion. Craig is trapped by Quest, but escapes to England, where Quest, Lenora and the professor follow him. Lord Ashleigh is murdered by the Hands. Lenora is abducted in London and rescued. Craig is captured and escapes to Port Said.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE SHIP OF HORROR.

Quest leaned a little forward and gazed down the line of steamer chairs. The professor, in a borrowed overcoat and cap, was reclining at full length, studying a book on seagulls which he had found in the library. Laura and Lenora were both dozing tranquilly. Mr. Harris of Scotland Yard was deep in a volume of detective stories.

"As a pleasure cruise," Quest remarked grimly, "this little excursion seems to be a complete success."

Laura opened her eyes at once.

"Trying to get my goat again, eh?" she retorted. "I suppose that's what you're after. Going to tell me, I suppose, that it wasn't Craig I saw aboard this steamer?"

"We are all liable to make mistakes," Quest observed, "and I am inclined to believe that this is one of yours."

Laura's expression was a little dogged.

"If he's too clever for you and Mr. Harris," she said, "I can't help that. I only know that he came on board. My eyes are the one thing in life I do believe."

"If you'll excuse me saying so, Miss Laura," Harris ventured, leaning deferentially towards her, "there isn't a passenger on board this ship, or a servant, or one of the crew, whom we haven't seen. We've been into every stateroom, and we've even searched the hold. We've been over the ship, backwards and forwards. The captain's own steward has been our guide, and we've conducted an extra search on our own account. Personally, I must say I have come to the same conclusion as Mr. Quest. At the present moment there is no such person as the man we are looking for on board this steamer."

"Then he either changed into another one," Laura declared obstinately, "or else he jumped overboard."

"Come on, Harris, you and I promised to report to the captain this morning. I don't suppose he'll be any too pleased with us. Let's get through with it."

The two men walked down the deck together. They found the captain alone in his room, with a chart spread out in front of him and a pair of compasses in his hand. He turned round and greeted them.

"Well?"

"No luck, sir," Quest announced. "Your steward has given us every assistance possible and we have searched the ship thoroughly. Unless he has found a hiding place unknown to your steward, and not apparent to us, the man is not on board."

The captain frowned slightly.

"You are not suggesting that this is possible, I suppose?"

Quest did not at once reply. He was thinking of Laura's obstinacy.

"Personally," he admitted, "I should not have believed it possible. The young lady of our party, however, who declares that she saw Craig board the steamer, is quite immovable."

"Brown," said the captain, turning to the steward, "I understand that you say that you have taken those gentlemen into every corner of the ship, that you have ransacked every possible hiding place, that you have given them every possible opportunity of searching for themselves?"

"That is quite true, sir," the man acknowledged.

"You agree with me that it is impossible for anyone to remain hidden in this ship?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You hear, gentlemen?" the captain continued. "I really can do no more. What the mischief are you hanging about for, Brown?" he asked, turning to the steward, who was standing by with a carpet-sweeper in his hand.

"Room wants cleaning out badly, sir."

The captain glanced distastefully at the carpet-sweeper.

"Do it when I am at dinner, then," he ordered. "And take that damned thing away."

The steward obeyed promptly. Quest and Harris followed him down the deck.

"Rather a[illegible] fellow, that," the latter remarked. "Doesn't seem quite at his ease, does he?"

"Seemed a trifle embarrassed, I thought, when he was showing us round the ship," Quest agreed.

"Now, Harris murmured, quite as the gentleman who wrote [illegible] I am reading Pole[illegible] to keep our eye on [illegible]

[illegible] who was down the [illegible] suspect the [illegible] and [illegible] upon the [illegible]

They settled down into the places [illegible]

An elderly lady, dressed in somewhat oppressive black, with a big cameo brooch at her throat and a black satin bag in her hand, was being shown by the steward to a seat by Quest's side. She acknowledged the captain's greeting acidly.

"Good evening, captain," she said. "I understood from the second steward that the seat on your right hand would be reserved for me. I am Mrs. Foston Rowe."

The captain received the announcement calmly.

"Very pleased to have you at the table, madam," he replied. "As to the seating, I leave that entirely to the steward. I never interfere myself."

Laura pinched his arm, and Lenora glanced away to hide a smile. Mrs. Foston Rowe studied the menu disapprovingly.

"Hors d'oeuvres," she declared, "I never touch. No one knows how long they've been opened. Bouillon—I will have some bouillon, steward."

"In one moment, madam."

The professor came ambling along towards the table.

"I fear that I am a few moments late," he remarked, as he took the chair next to Mrs. Foston Rowe. I offer you my apologies, captain. I congratulate you upon your library. I have discovered a most interesting book upon the habits of seagulls. It kept me engrossed until the very last moment, and I am hungry."

"Well, you'll have to stay hungry a long time at this table then," Mrs. Foston Rowe snapped. "Seems to me that the service is going to be abominable."

The steward, who had just arrived, presented a cup of bouillon to Quest. The others had all been served. Quest stirred it thoughtfully.

"And as to the custom," Mrs. Foston Rowe continued, "of serving gentlemen before ladies, it is, I suppose, peculiar to this steamer."

Quest hastily laid down his spoon, raised the cup of bouillon and presented it with a little bow to his neighbor.

"Pray allow me, madam," he begged. "The steward was to blame."

Mrs. Foston Rowe did not hesitate for a moment. She broke up some toast in the bouillon and commenced to sip it.

The spoon suddenly went clattering from her fingers. She caught at the sides of the table, there was a strange

"A Message From the Hands! Look!"

look in her face. With scarcely a murmur she fell back in her seat. Quest leaned hurriedly forward.

There was a slight commotion. The doctor came hurrying up from the other side of the saloon. He bent over her and his face grew grave.

"What is it?" the captain demanded.

The doctor glanced at him meaningly.

"She had better be carried out," he whispered.

"Was it a faint?" Lenora asked.

"We shall know directly," the captain replied. "Better keep your places I think. Steward, serve the dinner as usual."

The man held out his hand to withdraw the cup of bouillon, but Quest drew it towards him.

"Let it wait for a moment," he ordered.

He glanced at the captain, who nodded back. In a few moments the doctor reappeared. He leaned down and whispered to the captain.

"Dead!"

Quest turned around.

"Doctor," he said, "I happen to have my chemical chest with me, and some special testing tubes. If you'll allow me, I'd like to examine this cup of bouillon. You might come round, too, if you will."

The captain nodded.

"I'd better stay here for a time," he decided. "I'll follow you presently."

The service of dinner was resumed. Laura, [illegible] place opposite Quest. The captain watched her anxiously.

[illegible] the [illegible] Quest [illegible] Mr. Quest," she murmured.

The captain called his steward.

"Where did you get the bouillon from you served—that last cup, especially?" he asked.

"From the pantry just as usual, sir," the man answered. "It was all served out from the same caldron."

"Any chance of anyone getting at it?"

"Quite impossible, sir."

In Quest's stateroom the doctor, the professor, Quest and Lenora were all gathered around two little tubes, which the criminologist was examining with an electric torch.

"No reaction at all," the latter muttered. "This isn't an ordinary poison, anyway."

The professor, who had been standing on one side, suddenly gave vent to a soft exclamation.

"Wait!" he whispered. "Wait! I have an idea."

He hurried off to his stateroom. The doctor was poring over a volume of tabulated poisons. Quest was still watching his tubes. Lenora sat upon the couch. Suddenly the professor reappeared. He was carrying a small notebook in his hand, his manner betrayed some excitement. He closed the door carefully behind him.

"I want you all," he begged, "to listen very carefully to me. You will discover the application of what I am going to read when I am finished. Now, if you please."

"This," he began, "is the diary of a tour made by Craig and myself in northern Egypt some fourteen years ago. Here is the first entry of import:

MONDAY—Twenty-nine miles southeast of Port Said. We have stayed for two days at a little Mongar village. I have today come to the definite conclusion that anthropoid apes were at one time denizens of this country.

TUESDAY—Both Craig and I have been a little uneasy today. These Mongars into whose encampment we have found our way, are one of the strangest and fiercest of the nomad tribes. They are descended, without a doubt, from the ancient Mongolians, who invaded this country some seven hundred years before Christ, but have preserved in a marvelous way their individuality as a race. They have the narrow eyes and the thick nose base of the pure Oriental; also much of his cunning. One of their special weaknesses seems to be the invention of the most hideous forms of torture, which they apply remorselessly to their enemies.

WEDNESDAY—This has been a wonderful day for us, chiefly owing to what I must place on record as an act of great bravery by Craig, my servant. Early this morning, a man-eating lion found his way into the encampment. The Mongars behaved like arrant cowards. They fled right and left, leaving the chief's little daughter, Feerda, at the brute's mercy. Craig, who is by no means an adept in the use of firearms, chased the animal as he was making off with the child, and, more by good luck than anything else, managed to wound it mortally. He brought the child back to the encampment just as the chief and the warriors of the tribe returned from a hunting expedition. Our position here is now absolutely secure. We are treated like gods, and, appreciating my weakness for all matters of science, the chief has today explained to me many of the secret mysteries of the tribe. Amongst other things, he has shown me a wonderful secret poison, known only to this tribe, which they call Veedemzoo. It brings almost instant death, and is exceedingly difficult to trace. The addition of sugar causes a curious condensation and resolves it almost to a white paste. The only antidote is a substance which they use here freely, and which is exactly equivalent to our camphor.

The professor closed his book. Quest promptly rang the bell.

"Some sugar," he ordered, turning to the steward.

They waited in absolute silence. The suggestion which the professor's disclosure had brought to them was stupefying, even Quest's fingers, as a moment or two later he rubbed two knobs of sugar together so that the contents should fall into the tubes of bouillon, shook. The result was magical. The bouillon turned to a strange shade of gray and began slowly to thicken.

"It is Mongar poison!" the professor cried, with breaking voice.

They all looked at one another.

"Craig must be here amongst us," Quest muttered.

"And the bouillon," Laura cried, clasping Quest's arm, "the bouillon was meant for you!" . . .

There seemed to be, somehow, among all of them, a curious indisposition to discuss this matter. Suddenly Lenora, who was sitting on the lounge underneath the porthole, put out her hand and picked up a card which was lying by his side. She glanced at it, at first, curiously. Then she shrieked.

"A message!" she cried. "A message from The Hands! Look!"

They crowded around her. In that same familiar handwriting was scrawled across the face of the card these few words:

To Sanford Quest:

You have escaped this time by a chance of fortune, not because your wits are keen, not because of your own shrewdness; simply because Fate willed it. It will not be for long.

Underneath was the drawing of the clenched hands.

"There is no longer any doubt," Lenora said calmly. "Craig is on board. He must have been on deck a few minutes ago. It was his hand which placed this card on the porthole . . . Listen! What's that?"

There was a scream from the deck. They all recognized Laura's voice. Harris was out of the stateroom first, but they were all on deck within ten seconds. Laura was standing with one hand clasping the rail, her hand fiercely outstretched towards the lower part of the promenade deck. Through the darkness they heard the sound of angry voices.

"What is it, Laura?" Lenora cried.

She [illegible] room upon them.

"Craig!" she cried. "Craig! I saw his face as I sat in my chair there, [illegible] to the captain. I saw [illegible] something else. He must have been leaning over the rail. He heard me call out and he disappeared.

KNOW THY COUNTRY

III---Telegraph and Telephone

Our transportation facilities are the most perfect product of this great commercial age and the telegraph and telephone systems of this nation crown the industrial achievements of the whole world. These twin messengers of modern civilization, born in the skies, stand today the most faithful and efficient public servants that ever toiled for the human race.

They are of American nativity and while warm from the mind of the inventive genius have, under American supervision, spun a network of wires across the earth and under the seas Telegraphy, in its early youth, mastered the known world and the telephone has already conquered the earth's surface, and now stands at the seashore ready to leap across the ocean.

No industry in the history of the world has ever made such rapid strides in development and usefulness, and none has ever exerted a more powerful influence upon the civilization of its day than the Telegraph and Telephone. Their achievement demonstrates the supremacy of two distinct types of American genius—invention and organization.

The industry was peculiarly fortunate in having powerful inventive intellect at its source and tremendous minds to direct its organization and growth. It is the most perfect fruit of the tree of American industry and when compared with its European contemporaries, it thrills every patriotic American with pride.

Ambitious youth can find no more inspiring company than the fellowship of the giant intellects that constructed this marvelous industry and a journey along the pathway of its development, illuminated at every mile-post of its progress by the lightning flashes of brilliant minds, will be taken at a very early date.

A brief statistical review of the industry brings out its growth and magnitude in a most convincing and unforgetable manner.

The telephone service of the United States is the most popular and efficient and its rates are the cheapest of the telephone systems of the world.

We are the greatest talkers on earth We send 60 per cent of our communications over the telephone. The world has about 17,000,000 telephones and of this number the United States has approximately 9,540,600. Europe 4,020 600 and other countries 1,300,000. According to the latest world telephone census, the total telephone investment is $1,900,000 000 and of this amount $1,095,000,000 was credited to the United States $636 000 000 in Europe and $177,000 000 in other countries. OBITUARY

Mrs. Melvina Shaw Cairns died at her home in Mt. Zion Wednesday morning, May 18, 1915, aged about 41 years. She is survived by her husband and six children, Ada, Ruth, Floyd, Oscar, Phoebe and Andrew, also by her mother, Mrs Sarah E. Shaw, of Clearfield, and the following brothers and sisters Peter Shaw, of Goshen; Mrs. Lucy Hennessy, of Stonebore, Mercer county; Mrs. Fred Lawhead, of Hyde City, and Mrs. Lewis Reed, of Clearfield. Funeral services were held at her home Friday afternoon, interment in Goshen cemetery.

She may sleep, but not forever,
In her lone and silent grave;
Blessed be the Lord who taketh,
Blessed be the Lord who gave.
In the bright, eternal city,
Death can never, never come;
In His own good time He'll call her
From her rest to home, sweet home.

Oil Treatment for Stomach Troubles

A simple prescription made up of a combination of pure vegetable oils is producing wonderful results for sufferers from stomach, liver and intestinal troubles The remedy, which is said to have originated in France, where it has been used for years by the peasantry, was introduced into this country by George H. Mayr, a leading Chicago druggist, who cured himself of severe stomach, liver and intestinal troubles by its use Those who have used it say the first dose is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable merit, and that within twenty-four hours the sufferer feels like a new person. This medicine, which has become known as Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, is sold by leading druggists everywhere with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.

VOLUME IX. CLEARFIELD PENNSYLVANIA, TUESDAY, MAY 25, 1915. NUMBER 224

MAKE COUNTY ROADS BEST IN THE STATE

Everybody Should Get Out and Hustle With Pick And Shovel

MANY AUTOS WILL CONVEY MEN TO WORK

Let Clearfield County Citizens Make Record of Which They and Their Children May be Proud

With the appearance of the sun today the hope of those who feared that the wet weather would interfere with the program of Good Roads Day tomorrow revived. The rains of the past three days soaked the ground completely, but except in certain localities it is believed that the highways will be in condition to permit work to be done on them tomorrow. Where there is still dampness the road drag will be found very useful.

Many Automobiles Ready

All preparations for the great day have been completed, and indications point to a big outpouring of hard-handed sons of toil in every section of the county. Arrangements have been made with owners of automobiles and thirty-six of these cars will be at the service of the workers tomorrow, while wagons will convey others to the places in which they choose to work.

Get Out and Hustle Tomorrow

Everybody should get out and hustle tomorrow. Clearfield county should have the best township roads in Central Pennsylvania, and this will be the result if the men and boys of the county do their duty tomorrow. One day's work will not hurt anybody, and after it is all over the contemplation of the benefit that has been derived from a task well done and the getting in touch with the residents of the townships will be ample reward for lame backs and blisters. Get out on the roads and make the dirt fly.

Meet at High School Building

All men and boys who intend to work on the Penfield road will meet at the high school building tomorrow morning at 7 o'clock or as soon thereafter as possible. Workers are requested to bring with them their dinners, picks and shovels. Three automobiles will convey lunches to the different sections of the road. The suffragists will have charge of the refreshments.

It is proposed to begin work on the Penfield road at the borough line and work as far as the watering trough at the top of the mountain. The high school building will be headquarters for a number of the squads who will work on the roads. The high school boys will be in charge of Professor Zerfoss.

Some Stores Will Close

Good Roads Day enthusiasm has been so spontaneous that the Chamber of Commerce decided at a meeting of its board of governors yesterday not to ask its members to close their stores Wednesday. Notwithstanding that, there will be a number of local houses closed part of the day, at least, and all employees will be given an opportunity to contribute their services to the general movement.

TWILIGHT BASEBALL LEAGUE PREPARING FOR GOOD GAMES

Baseball! The fans will again have the opportunity of seeing some fast ball playing this evening, if the condition of the grounds will permit. A new team which will be known as the "West Side" has been admitted. Several rules were made last Thursday when a reorganization of the Twilight league was effected. One of these rules requires each manager to file with the secretary an eligible list, on which there are but 15 men. Under the new organization the league will be governed in a more successful manner.

Trolley Car Kills Morrisdale Miner

John Bodick, a miner who worked at the Morrisdale shaft at Morrisdale, was struck and killed by a trolley car Saturday in that place. Bodick and two companions were walking along the track when a car approached them. Just as the car was near the men Bodick stepped on the track and was almost instantly killed.

An investigation by Coroner Pollum showed that the motorman had taken every precaution to prevent an accident and that the man had met death by his own act in stepping on the track when he knew a car was approaching him. No inquest was held.

MAKING LITTLE BUSINESS MEN—WILL YOU HELP?

The cheerful young gentleman who delivers your paper this afternoon is one of the young business men of the city, if you please, for he has been taken into partnership with The Progress.

Heretofore the young man has been paid a stipulated sum for delivering papers on a certain route. That arrangement limited his earnings, and he wanted an opportunity to earn more. So we are turning over to him the pleasant responsibility of calling on you every Saturday morning to collect for the paper. Six cents will be the sum, and he will get a share of it which will almost double his present pay.

With your approval of the plan theseyoung men (there are seventeen of them, by the way) will begin their new duties on the first Saturday in June. All monthly accounts will be closed as of May 30, and subscriptions due on that date will be called for by the regular collectors. Paid in advance subscribers will not be called upon under the new system until their subscriptions expire.

Will you help these young men in their first business venture? They are enthusiastic over the plan, and promise you unfailing service.

BAVARIAN TROOPS ARE MASSACRED BY GUNS OF GERMANS

Kaiser's Officers Turn Guns on Own Men Who Wanted to Surrender

Saxon Soldiers Brutally Shot Down by Prussians While They Stood in Front of British Lines With Their Hands Above Their Heads in Token of Surrender.

London, May 25.—The British "eye-witnesses" at the army headquarters in France describes the scene, mentioned in the official report at the time, of German artillery fire being directed on their own men who were offering to surrender near Ferme Cour de Le Boue.

"Desperate fighting," says the narrative, "was going on in front of this farm when the remains of a battalion of Saxons which, it appears, had been hastily brought down from further north, were thrown into the fight. Having decided to surrender en bloc, they advance dtoward our lines. Not knowing what movement this mass of men implied, our infantry poured a hail of bullets into them, whereupon survivors threw down their rifles and held up their hadns. One of their number waved a white rag tied to a stick.

"As soon as the Prussian infantry on the north of this point realized what their Saxon comrades were trying to do, they opened a rapid fire from the flank, enfilading them. It appears also that the news of what was happening must have been telephoned to German artillery further east, which also porbably was Prussian, since its guns suddenly opened on the Saxon infantry, and under this combined fire most of the latter were very soon accounted for."

Inspect State Road at Curwensville

W. D. Myers, state highway engineer, accompanied by the county commissioners, W. C. Longsford, J. S. Richards and H. L. Bowman, left this afternoon for Curwensville, where, together with the borough officials of that town they will inspect the new state road which has just been completed there.

The road is of brick laid on a concrete base and was built by the Curwensville Construction company under the direct supervision of the local office of the state highway department. The road is 6038 feet in length and lies entirely in Curwensville borough.

The construction company and the state highway department are being highly commended on this excellent peice of road. The total cost of the road if $26,789.56, of which sum the county and the borough will each pay a fourth, the state paying the balance.

LACK OF HOUSES GREATLY HAMPERS TEXTILE COMPANY

Homes Needed for a Large Number of Skilled Silk Operatives

Company Desires to Double Its Capacity, But Must Wait Until Housing of New Employes is Assured —Local Capital May be Induced to Erect Buildings on the West Side.

"Just as soon as we can find houses for them to live in comfortably, and permanently, my principals are prepared to double the capacity of the Clearfield Textile company's plant," said E. H. Crozier, American agent for the European interests which own the local silk mill, on a recent visit to the city.

"Our plans are ready to be put into execution," he continued, "but the folly is apparent of bringing a hundred or more skilled workerss to the city when there are no homes available for them."

Would Double Capacity

The company plans to add 75 looms to the 75 now in operation as soon as it is assured that the skilled operators engaged for the additional looms will be properly housed.

"Why doesn't the company itself erect houses for its operators?" Mr. Crozier was asked.

"My people are unwilling to invest any part of their capital in house construction. They are silk producers, and all the money they can find for investment is used in the expansion of the plants they now have in operation in this country and Europe."

Local Capitalists Interested

The Chamber of Commerce is bending its energies toward finding the capital necessary for the construcion of moderate priced homes in the vicinityq of the silk mill, adn a number of local men are interested in this development of the west side. Twenty or more small homes are needed to accommodate the added force the mill people are waiting to bring to Clearfield, and there is every assurance that they will be provided.

NINE MEN KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Johnstown, May 25.—An explosion in mine No. 1 of the Valley Smokeless Coal company, near here, late yesterday, caused nine deaths. Eight miners were killed by the explosion and Homer Phillips, chief of the first aid department of the Cambria Steel company, died in a hospital last night as a result of being overcome by gas while heading a rescue party.

The miners killed, all of whom were Americans were:

Edward Evans and his sons—David and ames Evans, Jacob Wolf, John Hoffman, Charles Stephein, Valentine Chocal and C. F. Hays.

The mine was not in operation yesterday and the victims had received permission to go what work they could to earn extra money. No one was near the mine when the explosion, which was about 2000 feet from the entrance, occurred.

The proclamation is [illegible] conventional [illegible] differing [illegible] from those issued [illegible] warring nations. It contains [illegible] 1500 and 2000 words.

(By United Press)

London, May 25. Italian successes on the sea and land were detailed but to small extent, in reports received here today.

The Italian cavalry crossed the boundary at Isondra and captured several enemy outposts.

An Italian cruiser shelled the city of Portz-Burzo, at the head of the Adriatic. The Austrian gunboat Quay was destroyed and two of the enemy were killed. There were no casualties aboard the destroyer.

King Goes to Front

King Victor Emanuel is on his way to the front, escorted by the cavalry and is being greeted with an enthusiastic ovation.

For publishing details that the British fleet was in the Adriatic, the admiralty issued a reprimand to the Rome newspapers, as it was desired to have these facts as little known as possible.

During the bombardment of Ancona two persons were killed in a train which was struck. Part of the station and five engines were badly damaged.

Austrians Attack Coast

Austria-Hungary opened hostilities against Italy yesterday morning by a combined aerial and naval attack on several ports of the Adriatic coast from Venice as far south as Barletta, north of Bari, a total distance of about 250 miles. The attack failed, according to an official announcement made by the Italian government, the Austrians being forced to withdraw.

Aeroplanes are Active

Austrian aeroplanes, flying from Pola, the naval base, during the night, appeared over Venice shortly after 4 o'clock this morning and attempted to hurl bombs on the arsenal. Anti-air craft guns at the forts guarding Venice blazed away at the invaders, while Italian airmen and a dirigible flying over the Adriatic came to the rescue. The Austrians were driven off.

Austrians Forced to Flee

At about the same time other Austrian air craft attacked the ports of Porto Corsini, 6 miles south of Venice, Ancona, 8 miles further south, and Gesi, 14 miles below Ancona. Austrian torpedo boats and a small scout steamer made an attack on Barletta, about 25 miles north of Bari, and a slight naval engagement followed, the Italian vessels forcing the Austrians to flee to the northward.

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 25, 1915

Good evening! Anybody can be cheerful in nice weather; it is the philosopher who can be cheerful when the clouds are pouring down wetness.

EVERYBODY GETTING READY

With the rural population, at least, the absorbing topic of conversation at present is the forthcoming State-wide Good Roads Day. If the enthusiasm which is apparent in the country districts continues to grow there will be a small army of workmen on the highways tomorrow, May twenty-sixth, and each man and boy will have a pick or shovel in his hands, doing what he can to uphold the reputation of the townships for good work on the roads.

Should the weather be favorable there is not the least doubt that everybody not prevented by sickness or other disability will labor to improve the township highways. From every part of Clearfield county come reports of the desire of the male population to be enrolled in the army of road makers. Even the women have been seized by the spirit of activity that is abroad, and while they cannot wield the road-making implements they can cheer those who work and provide refreshments for the laborers.

There is no disputing the fact that many of the township roads in this county are in need of improvement. Some of these roads are practically impassable at certain times of the year, and if these can be put in fairly good condition on Good Roads Day the effect cannot help being beneficial, not only to the farmers residing in the townships, but to the town resident who uses the roads for pleasure driving in automobile or buggy. Under the direction of the supervisors these roads can be and no doubt will be greatly improved.

Those townspeople who frequently drive into the country are as much interested in the work of improving the highways as are the rural communities. The urbanite is cordially invited to join the crews which will work on the roads leading into Clearfield, and they will be recreant of their duty, both to themselves and the country residents, if they fail to "make the dirt fly" tomorrow. The town resident should not let his mind dwell upon possible blisters, but should feel that it is a great honor to be with and work with those who want to see Pennsylvania have the best rural roads of any state in the union.

PRO-GERMANISM AND COMMON SENSE

Because Dr. Dernburg, Count von Bernstorff and other German citizens who owe this country only the courtesies expected of men who are the nation's guests, and none of the obligations imposed upon others of their birth who are now generally classified as German-Americans, prove offensive in their efforts to justify kultur-murder, there seems little justification for the unpleasant position in which several millions of our citizens have been placed by reason of their now happily curbed activity.

To our intense Americanism it is not inconceivable that in the overseas war an overwhelming proportion of our hyphenated Americans of German origin are strong, even reckless, in defense of their Fatherland or the land of their fathers, and the methods used by Germany in waging war upon enemies who have been considered by two generations of Germans as hereditary foes of the empire.

Could our Americanism, or common sense, depending upon the viewpoint, picture ten millions of American expatriates resident in Great Britain, we might ask what would be the sentiment among them in the event of war between Germany and the United States? And we would answer with perfect assurance. They would be just as intensely pro-American in such a situation as our German-American citizens are pro-German in the present one.

If our heedless critics of pro-Germanism would pause to fit to themselves the case of the German-American, we believe that to some ten millions of our fellow-citizens would quickly be restored all the honors of their adopted citizenship and the full masure of this country's confidence in their loyalty to the flag which to them must represent ideals impossible of attainment in the land of their immediate forefathers.

Boosts and Booms For State Good Roads Day

Harrisburg, May 25.—The road commissioners of Solley township Sullivan county, have issued a statement to the citizens calling on them to observe the State-wide Good Roads Day; "The success of the day depends on you. Its possibilities are great and if each of us does our little share it will designate a great improvement in the conditions of the road." declares the statement. Commenting on this the Republican News Item of Laporte, says: "Wishing for better highways won't bring them, but a determination to get out and hustle will stimulate the movement."

The farm bureau in Lycoming county is exercising every effort to make the State-wide Good Roads Day successful. D. H. Bell, county agriculturist, has issued an appeal to citizens to work on that day. William Decker, of Montgomery, chairman of the school committee, has offered a one-hundred-dollar prize to the township or townships considered the most deserving because of improvements made to their roads during the coming season.

Cooperation of the propper sort is exhibited in Butler county. The Butler chamber of commerce, Butler Businessmens' association and the Butler country farm bureau, together with several other organizations acting with the officers of the township supervisor's association have organized a central committee of forty-five divided into four sub-committees, each to perform special service on that day. Suggestion is made that should May 26 prove stormy, the first good day thereafter be devoted to Good Roads.

An enthusiastic mass meeting was held on Saturday, May 8, in Elmhurst. Support was pledged to the Lackawanna County Good Roads association to aid in making the State-wide Good Roads Day successful.

Roosevelt's Statement Not Libel, Says Jury

A jury in Syracuse decided Saturday that the following statement, made by Theodore Roosevelt, on July 22, 1914, referring to William Barnes, Jr., is no libel:

"In New York state we see at its worst the development of the system of bipartisan boss rule. The outcome of this system is necessarily that invisible government which the Progressive party was in large part founded to oppose. It is impossible to secure the economic, social and industrial reforms to which we are pledged until this invisible government of the party bosses, working through the alliance between crooked business and crooked politics, is rooted out of our government system.

"The state government is rotten throughout in most of its departments.

"The interests of Mr. Barnes and Mr. Murphy are fundamentally identical, and when the issue between popular rights and corrupt and machine-ruled government is clearly drawn, the two bosses will always be found fighting on the same side, openly or covertly, giving one another such support as can with safety be rendered.

"They really form the allpowerful, invisible government which is responsible for the maladministration and corruption in the public offices of the state."

Only 5% PLUS for the Best "Non-Skid"

PRACTICALLY all Non-Skid Tires that make serious claims to non-skid efficiency cost you 10% to 30% more than Plain Tread Tires of same brand and material.

Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our plain tread tires.

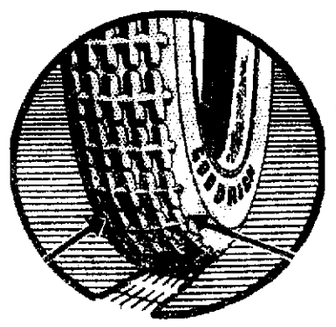
Here's how and Why!

o o o

FORTY-FIVE years of Rubber learning (in what is now the World's largest Rubber Factory) has taught us a few Tricks and Short-cuts that are not common to the Trade.

One of these now comes to the help of your Pocket-book.

Through the simple process of Thinking Hard (and being Candid with ourselves) we have found a Short-Cut to make the last Safety Tread ever put on a Tire cost us only about 5% more than it costs to make the Plain-Tread of similar quality.



Goodrich Safety Tread Tires cost you only 5% more than our own or any other plain tread tires.

Note the following table of comparative prices on non-skid tires. Columns headed "A," "B," "C" and "D" represent four highly advertised tires

Size	Goodrich Safety Tread	OTHER MAKES "A"	"B"	"C"	"D"
30 x 3	$9.45	$10.55	$10.95	$16.35	$18.10
30 x 3½	12.20	13.35	14.20	21.70	23.60
32 x 3½	14.00	15.40	16.30	22.85	25.30
34 x 4	20.35	22.30	23.80	31.15	33.55
36 x 4½	28.70	32.15	33.60	41.85	41.40
37 x 5	33.90	39.80	41.80	49.85	52.05

By testing out these Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires on a large number of Taxicabs (where they could be competitively observed and carefully checked up at the end of each day's use) and by comparing their actual performance with that of our own, and other Plain-Treads, of much higher price, we have had this fact forced upon us—

Viz:

—That there is SURPRISINGLY more Mileage, in Goodrich Safety Tread Tires, than in our own, or any other, make of Plain-Tread Tires.

So MUCH more Mileage, for only 5% more Cost, looked so good to us that we decided to give Car Owners the benefit.

Here's what we now offer you!

The best Non-Skid Safety Tread ever put on the market, and it costs you only 5% more than our best plain tread tire.

SYNOPSIS.

Sanford Quest, master criminologist of the world, finds that in bringing to justice Macdougal, the murderer of Lord Ashleigh's daughter, he has but just begun a life-and-death struggle with a mysterious master criminal. In a hidden hut in Professor Ashleigh's garden he has seen an anthropoid ape skeleton and a living inhuman creature, half monkey, half man, destroyed by fire. In his rooms have appeared from nowhere black boxes containing sarcastic, threatening notes signed by a pair of armless hands. Laura and Lenora, his assistants, suspect Craig, the professor's servant, of a double murder. The black boxes continue to appear in uncanny fashion. Craig is trapped by Quest, but escapes to England, where Quest, Lenora and the professor follow him. Lord Ashleigh is murdered by the Hands. Lenora is abducted in London and rescued. Craig is captured and escapes to Port Said.

TENTH INSTALLMENT.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE SHIP OF HORROR.

Quest leaned a little forward and gazed down the line of steamer chairs. The professor, in a borrowed overcoat and cap, was reclining at full length, studying a book on seagulls which he had found in the library. Laura and Lenora were both dozing tranquilly. Mr. Harris of Scotland Yard was deep in a volume of detective stories.

"As a pleasure cruise," Quest remarked grimly, "this little excursion seems to be a complete success."

Laura opened her eyes at once.

"Trying to get my goat again, eh?" she retorted. "I suppose that's what you're after. Going to tell me, I suppose, that it wasn't Craig I saw aboard this steamer?"

"We are all liable to make mistakes," Quest observed, "and I am inclined to believe that this is one of yours."

Laura's expression was a little dogged.

"If he's too clever for you and Mr. Harris," she said, "I can't help that. I only know that he came on board. My eyes are the one thing in life I do believe."

"If you'll excuse me saying so, Miss Laura," Harris ventured, leaning deferentially towards her, "there isn't a passenger on board this ship, or a servant, or one of the crew, whom we haven't seen. We've been into every stateroom, and we've even searched the hold. We've been over the ship, backwards and forwards. The captain's own steward has been our guide, and we've conducted an extra search on our own account. Personally, I must say I have come to the same conclusion as Mr. Quest. At the present moment there is no such person as the man we are looking for on board this steamer."

"Then he either changed into another one," Laura declared obstinately, "or else he jumped overboard."

"Come on, Harris, you and I promised to report to the captain this morning. I don't suppose he'll be any too pleased with us. Let's get through with it."

The two men walked down the deck together. They found the captain alone in his room, with a chart spread out in front of him and a pair of compasses in his hand. He turned round and greeted them.

"Well?"

"No luck, sir," Quest announced. "Your steward has given us every assistance possible and we have searched the ship thoroughly. Unless he has found a hiding place unknown to your steward, and not apparent to us, the man is not on board."

The captain frowned slightly.

"You are not suggesting that this is possible, I suppose?"

Quest did not at once reply. He was thinking of Laura's obstinacy.

"Personally," he admitted, "I should not have believed it possible. The young lady of our party, however, who declares that she saw Craig board the steamer, is quite immovable."

"Brown," said the captain, turning to the steward, "I understand that you say that you have taken those gentlemen into every corner of the ship, that you have ransacked every possible hiding place, that you have given them every possible opportunity of searching for themselves?"

"That is quite true, sir," the man acknowledged.

"You agree with me that it is impossible for anyone to remain hidden in this ship?"

"Absolutely, sir."

"You hear, gentlemen?" the captain continued. "I really can do no more. What the mischief are you hanging about for, Brown?" he asked, turning to the steward, who was standing by with a carpet-sweeper in his hand.

"Room wants cleaning out badly, sir."

The captain glanced distastefully at the carpet-sweeper.

"Do it when I am at dinner, then," he ordered. "And take that damned thing away."

The steward obeyed promptly. Quest and Harris followed him down the deck.

"Rather asking for it, that fellow, isn't he?" the latter remarked. "Doesn't seem quite at his ease, does he?"

"Seemed a trifle embarrassed, I thought, when he was showing us round the ship," Quest agreed.

"Pity Harris murmured, "that, as the gentleman who wrote the [illegible] Poe, 'to keep our eye on [illegible]'"

[illegible] who was down the [illegible] suppose the [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] the seats.

They settled down into the places [illegible]

An elderly lady, dressed in somewhat oppressive black, with a big cameo brooch at her throat and a black satin bag in her hand, was being shown by the steward to a seat by Quest's side. She acknowledged the captain's greeting acidly.

"Good evening, captain," she said. "I understood from the second steward that the seat on your right hand would be reserved for me. I am Mrs. Foston Rowe."

The captain received the announcement calmly.

"Very pleased to have you at the table, madam," he replied. "As to the seating, I leave that entirely to the steward. I never interfere myself."

Laura pinched his arm, and Lenora glanced away to hide a smile. Mrs. Foston Rowe studied the menu disapprovingly.

"Hors d'oeuvres," she declared, "I never touch. No one knows how long they've been opened. Bouillon—I will have some bouillon, steward."

"In one moment, madam."

The professor came ambling along towards the table.

"I fear that I am a few moments late," he remarked, as he took the chair next to Mrs. Foston Rowe. I offer you my apologies, captain. I congratulate you upon your library. I have discovered a most interesting book upon the habits of seagulls. It kept me engrossed until the very last moment, and I am hungry."

"Well, you'll have to stay hungry a long time at this table then," Mrs. Foston Rowe snapped. "Seems to me that the service is going to be abominable."

The steward, who had just arrived, presented a cup of bouillon to Quest. The others had all been served. Quest stirred it thoughtfully.

"And as to the custom," Mrs. Foston Rowe continued, "of serving gentlemen before ladies, it is, I suppose, peculiar to this steamer."

Quest hastily laid down his spoon, raised the cup of bouillon and presented it with a little bow to his neighbor.

"Pray allow me, madam," he begged. "The steward was to blame."

Mrs. Foston Rowe did not hesitate for a moment. She broke up some toast in the bouillon and commenced to sip it.

The spoon suddenly went clattering from her fingers. She caught at the sides of the table, there was a strange

"A Message From the Hands! Look!"

look in her face. With scarcely a murmur she fell back in her seat. Quest leaned hurriedly forward.

There was a slight commotion. The doctor came hurrying up from the other side of the saloon. He bent over her and his face grew grave.

"What is it?" the captain demanded.

The doctor glanced at him meaningly.

"She had better be carried out," he whispered.

"Was it a faint?" Lenora asked.

"We shall know directly," the captain replied. "Better keep your places I think. Steward, serve the dinner as usual."

The man held out his hand to withdraw the cup of bouillon, but Quest drew it towards him.

"Let it wait for a moment," he ordered.

He glanced at the captain, who nodded back. In a few moments the doctor reappeared. He leaned down and whispered to the captain.

"Dead!"

Quest turned around.

"Doctor," he said, "I happen to have my chemical chest with me, and some special testing tubes. If you'll allow me, I'd like to examine this cup of bouillon. You might come round, too, if you will."

The captain nodded.

"I'd better stay here for a time," he decided. "I'll follow you presently."

The service of dinner was resumed. Laura, [illegible] place [illegible] was. The captain watched her anxiously.

KNOW THY COUNTRY

III---Telegraph and Telephone

Our transportation facilities are the most perfect product of this great commercial age and the telegraph and telephone systems of this nation crown the industrial achievements of the whole world. These twin messengers of modern civilization, born in the skies, stand today the most faithful and efficient public servants that ever toiled for the human race.

They are of American nativity and while warm from the mind of the inventive genius have, under American supervision, spun a network of wires across the earth and under the seas Telegraphy, in its early youth, mastered the known world and the telephone has already conquered the earth's surface, and now stands at the seashore ready to leap across the ocean.

No industry in the history of the world has ever made such rapid strides in development and usefulness, and none has ever exerted a more powerful influence upon the civilization of its day than the Telegraph and Telephone. Their achievement demonstrates the supremacy of two distinct types of American genius—invention and organization.

The industry was peculiarly fortunate in having powerful inventive intellect at its source and tremendous minds to direct its organization and growth. It is the most perfect fruit of the tree of American industry and when compared with its European contemporaries, it thrills every patriotic American with pride.

Ambitious youth can find no more inspiring company than the fellowship of the giant intellects that constructed this marvelous industry and a journey along the pathway of its development, illuminated at every mile-post of its progress by the lightning flashes of brilliant minds, will be taken at a very early date.

A brief statistical review of the industry brings out its growth and magnitude in a most convincing and unforgetable manner.

The telephone service of the United States is the most popular and efficient and its rates are the cheapest of the telephone systems of the world.

We are the greatest talkers on earth We send 60 per cent of our communications over the telephone. The world has about 17,000,000 telephones and of this number the United States has approximately 9,540,600. Europe 4,020 600 and other countries 1,300,000. According to the latest world telephone census, the total telephone investment is $1,900,000 000 and of this amount $1,095,000,000 was credited to the United States $636 000 000 in Europe and $177,000 000 in other countries. The annual telephone conversations total 21,660,000,000 divided as follows: United States 15,600,000,000; Europe 6,800,000 000, and other countries 2,200,000,000 The total world wire telephone mileage is 33,262 000 miles divided as follows United States 20,248,000, Europe 10 335,000, and other countries 2,679 000. About six per cent of the world's population and sixty-one per cent of the telephone wire mileage is in the United States.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Melvina Shaw Cairns died at her home in Mt. Zion Wednesday morning, May 18, 1915, aged about 41 years. She is survived by her husband and six children, Ada, Ruth, Floyd, Oscar, Phoebe and Andrew, also by her mother, Mrs Sarah E. Shaw, of Clearfield, and the following brothers and sisters Peter Shaw, of Goshen; Mrs. Lucy Hennessy, of Stonebore, Mercer county; Mrs. Fred Lawhead, of Hyde City, and Mrs. Lewis Reed, of Clearfield. Funeral services were held at her home Friday afternoon, interment in Goshen cemetery.

She may sleep, but not forever,
In her lone and silent grave;
Blessed be the Lord who taketh,
Blessed be the Lord who gave.
In the bright, eternal city,
Death can never, never come;
In His own good time He'll call her
From her rest to home, sweet home.

Telephone! Across the county, or the State, or the country. Don't wait half a week for the answer that's important! It costs less to telephone, both in the short and the long run.

What's ten cents or fifty when the immediate answer is worth ten dollars or fifty?

Oil Treatment for Stomach Troubles

A simple prescription made up of a combination of pure vegetable oils is producing wonderful results for sufferers from stomach, liver and intestinal troubles The remedy, which is said to have originated in France, where it has been used for years by the peasantry, was introduced into this country by George H. Mayr, a leading Chicago druggist, who cured himself of severe stomach, liver and intestinal troubles by its use Those who have used it say the first dose is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable merit, and that within twenty-four hours the sufferer feels like a new person. This medicine, which has become known as Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, is sold by leading druggists everywhere with the positive understanding that your money will be refunded without question or quibble if ONE bottle fails to give you absolute satisfaction.
